Rulership, domination, honor among the powerful

King of the Court of Trials, rumored to be the twin brother of Solgarde. In many ways a dark mirror of the sun god -- honorable to a fault, arguably noble -- but his honor is the honor of the strong, and his belief is that strength is the only true source of the right to rule. Approximately fifty-one centuries ago, around the time of the Weohstannuk Empire's founding, Malachar acted alongside Solgarde in an unprecedented divine cooperation: the two kings, Light and Trials, jointly provided the divine power needed to seal Charoth's prison. That these two acted together -- even once -- is the kind of fact theologians quietly argue about for centuries. Conduct: Hold honor above all else. Keep one's word to the letter. Challenge established leaders directly, without skullduggery. Respect and obey those who outrank you until your own superiority is proven.
